Evidence Based

In 2014, Minding Your Mind collaborated with the Scattergood Foundation to gather and analyze data to prove an evidence-based program in both stigma reduction and help-seeking behavior. According to Scattergood’s findings, “...Minding Your Mind’s Speaker Program is an effective stigma reduction program, and one of the few in the country that has the data to prove it.”

Teacher Training

Minding Your Mind now offers three programs that are listed in the Best Practice Registry for Suicide Prevention Education Programs for school faculty and staff. More Than Sad, Just Talk About It and QPR programs fulfill the mental health education requirements of many states. To meet this demand, MYM has multiple clinicians to facilitate these presentations for teacher trainings.

Mindfulness

In 2015-2016 MYM greatly expanded our mindfulness programs, which developed into a comprehensive Introduction to Mindfulness, empowering teachers and staff to cultivate a mindful school community. This three-part program provides background on the history and benefits of mindfulness, and instruction on how to introduce practices into a classroom.

Learning Objectives

To support the organizations that welcome our programs, we have defined clear and achievable learning objectives for our most popular presentations: Young Adult Speaker Program, Just Talk About It Suicide Prevention Program, and QPR: Question, Persuade, Refer Suicide Prevention Training.

Our Goal

Minding Your Mind programs start as early as 5th grade. Our programs move away from crisis-based response to prevention through education. We aim to teach students to care for their mental wellness, as well as their physical health, in order to reach overall well-being. Rather than telling students what not to do, we help them to learn what they actually can do when striving for mental wellness.
